

CELL IS BLESSING TO BEAUTY WHO DESPISES FLIRTS

Chicago Girl, 19, Here in Search of "Career," Says
She's Glad of Arrest.

HER PLUCK SAVES HER.

Threat to Use Fists Deterred
Men Who Insulted Her in Work on Stage.

After three days and three nights as a member of a musical comedy troupe that toured the big barn circuit of Northern New Jersey, and after many other days of tramping from office to office in New York seeking employment, Miss Marie Stopper, nineteen years old, of No. 3448 North Trip Avenue, Chicago, declared to-day that she was glad to be in a cell, safely tucked away from the trials and temptations that beset a young woman seeking a "career" in the metropolis.

Miss Stopper's endeavor to land her desired position in life was thwarted by a warrant from Chicago, shown at the complaint of her mother, who wants Marie back in the family helping her to tidy up about the house and otherwise assisting herself to the homely duties of womanhood. She was arrested last night on this warrant, charging her with the larceny of $500 from her father, and awoke this morning in the West Thirtieth street police station. In the Yorkville Court she was ordered held for the arrival of a Chicago police officer.

An exceedingly pretty girl with big, babylike eyes of blue and with hair filled with sunshine, the Chicago career hunter boasts attractions that could have secured her plenty of positions had she not been so particular.

NEW YORK IS NO PLACE FOR A "GOOD GIRL," SHE SAYS.

"I have wanted to see New York ever since I was a little bit of a girl, and I have seen it and seen enough of it," she said to an Evening World reporter to-day. "It is no place for a good girl to come. I pity those who come here in the hope of getting a chance to amount to something in the world."

Studied elocution in Chicago and gained in amateur theatrical performance. I did think of becoming an actress and got a place with a musical comedy company which took the road in Northern New Jersey. We played matinees and nights for three days and nights and I was abundantly insulted. I had almost to use my fists to protect myself. It was no life for me, and I pity those girls who want to be actresses. I've learned my lesson.

"After leaving the show I began to answer advertisements and found places aplenty. But men wanted to flirt with me as soon as they saw me, and getting a job meant an invitation to dinner. If I had accepted all the invitations to dinner that I received while hunting for a place to work I would not now be so anxious to get home, even as a prisoner. Most of my time was spent in preventing men from insulting me. No more New York for me. I was glad to get in a police station cell last night."

Miss Stopper said that the question of money was not the important one. She had been employed in her father's business, the Star Plating Works, and she said, got tired of working there. She had hopes of doing something for herself and that is why she left home. What happened to the famous Mary of fiction and "movie" fame was just about what happened to Marie until her experiences were cut short.

TRAILED BY POLICE ON INQUIRY—SHE MADE IN CHICAGO.
Before leaving Chicago she had made inquiries as to the location of the Young Woman's Christian Association and the Martha Washington Hotel. From this knowledge she was trailed and finally arrested last night. Her good fortune in being found by the detectives may be laid to the pretty hat she wore, for her description sent from Chicago informed the New York police that she wore a

To Stay Beautiful, Housework Beats a Taxi; Lillian Russell Boasts of Scrubbing Floors

Loveliest Women and Most Perfect Figures Found in Costa Rica and Jamaica, Respectively, She Says, and They Aren't Opulent Blondes, Either.

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall.

Lillian Russell, herself the Venus Anadomini of masculine America, announces that she has found the most beautiful woman and likewise the most perfect female figure in all the world. Though her admirers may murmur, "Outside her own looking-glass!"—Miss Russell modestly refuses to make the exception. She doesn't even nominate the opulently blonde type of pulchritude which she has done so much to advertise in propria persona during the last half century or so.

The result of setting a beauty to catch a beauty is that Miss Russell declares the Spanish brunette of Costa Rica to be the loveliest of the world's women, and the native Jamaican female to be the possessor of the most flawless figure.

A man, gazing on Miss Russell's "azure eyes and aureate hair," would undoubtedly have lost the thread of her discourse on Spanish brunettes. Men are like that, I've noticed. But, thanks to cool feminine detachment, I am able to give you the details of the voyage of discovery among the West Indies, from which Lillian the Lasting has just returned, as well as certain of the discoverer's conclusions, which she thinks will interest other American women.

"I never in my life saw such beauties as the women of Costa Rica," she started off, enthusiastically. "It's mountainous there, you know, and a great deal of coffee is raised. No negroes are allowed on the coffee plantations, and the people are of the very purest Spanish blood, with almost no foreign admixture for generations. It seems to me that I saw no women who were not young, and the girls are the most radiant creatures! They have big, flashing, dark eyes, carnation-red lips and a glowing color. They wear their coal-black glossy hair drawn in a smooth mass to one side of their heads, and on the other side is a big red bow. Their figures are well developed, but never fat. And they are such little flirts!"

Miss Russell's own eyes began to twinkle reminiscently. "You see these girls walking about the street in groups of two or more," she said, "and quite unattended by men. But they are perfectly well aware of the existence of men. What did they do but smile and dimple and glance out of the corners of their eyes at the men in our party! Finally I asked a guide if they were respectable young persons or not respectable."

"He grinned and assured me that they were the daughters of the richest men in the place. The Spanish girl likes to flirt," he said. "She knows she is beautiful and she knows that men know it. When she smiles at

Two detectives from the West Thirtieth street station began studying her. Finally she saw the daisy chain bob out of the Martha Washington Hotel, and then saw the sunny hair, the baby eyes and the rest of the charms of Marie, formerly of the Northern Jersey barn circuit.

Inspector Faurot, who has daughters of his own, did not permit his underlings to put Marie in the line-up at Headquarters this morning. He gave her a chair in his office, where she sat demurely and thoroughly content at having police protection from all flirts and wicked men as the crook crop of the night before fled before the detectives for identification. A dispatch from Chicago received to-day indicates that Father and Mother Stopper will not press any charge against Marie. What punishment is to be meted out will be given within the home or perhaps in the woodshed.

And our own Lillian smiled approvingly, as if she would say, "Quite right, too!"

VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR AMERICAN WOMEN.

"Yet, though these Costa Rican women, taking them all around, are the most beautiful," she resumed, "the women of Jamaica interested me particularly. That is because I found such valuable suggestions for myself and other American women in Jamaica."

"A Spanish brunette has to be born, but a good figure can be made. The Jamaican woman has the figure of a Venus, and she has developed it by hard work and by carrying burdens on the top of her head."

"Last year I lectured on how to live to be a hundred and die young. Those women in Jamaica live to be a hundred and ten and a hundred and fifteen. They don't think they're even beginning to be middle-aged until they are seventy-five."

They do most of the work on the island, and when they are little children they commence carrying bundles on top of their heads. As they become mature, the size of the burden increases. All over Jamaica you see grown women bearing huge bunches of unripe bananas, or wicker baskets of vegetables, or heavier packages of tobacco, down to the ships or across country to the markets. It's all balanced on their heads, and they usually walk with their arms folded.

"When a weighty load is balanced on the head the shoulders are kept from hollowing, the back is straight, the bust is high, the hips are narrow and there is no ugly lump of fat at the back of the neck. It is a splendid exercise for women."

"Look and see how graceful the pose is!" Miss Russell broke off, jumping up. We were talking in the library of her apartment on Eighty-ninth street. In an instant an unabridged dictionary was poised on its owner's golden coiffure, and with one hand just touching the edge of the volume she walked triumphantly across the room.

SHE IS GOING TO PRACTICE BALANCING.

"I'm going to practice twenty or thirty minutes every morning until I can keep both hands down," she vowed. "And I advise every woman to try balancing a book on her head when she finds that she is beginning to lose her figure."

"I suppose these Jamaican women didn't wear corsets," I hazarded.

"Neither corsets nor shoes," said Miss Russell. "And in a back view I frequently mistook a woman of seventy for one of twenty, so straight and slender was her figure. The women had beautifully shaped feet, too, and slender ankles, due to their walking so much. There are no cag-

LAW KIND TO SLAYER OF GIRL'S BETRAYER

Father Who Killed Man Who Abducted Daughter Gets Off With Five Years.

"It's a shame, a shame to send my father to prison for killing that brute. He only did what any father would do."

A very pretty fourteen-year-old Italian girl, Nellie Di Angelo, so voiced her sentiments to attendants in Judge Crain's court in General Sessions to-day after her father, Pietro, had been sentenced to Sing Sing prison for a term of not less than five years and one month and not more than ten years and two months. Di Angelo was convicted March 12 of manslaughter in the first degree. He shot and killed Gaspare Mattrelli at Seventeenth street and Third avenue on Sept. 22 last.

Di Angelo is sixty-one years old and a cripple. Because of that fact and the fact that the testimony at his trial showed that he was despondent his home, Judge Crain was lenient with the old man. He had been sentenced to twenty years in order to avoid him the whole lot of prisoners. He said that Mattrelli had pursued her for months, and in order to avoid him the whole lot of prisoners. He said that Mattrelli soon found out where she was living, and, calling at her home, pointed a revolver at her and under a gasp of death took her to a room on Third avenue, where he kept her a prisoner and compelled her to submit to advances of other men.
